Introduction

The fact that you are reading this document demonstrates your desire to improve the quality of your dates, so as not to waste your time and that of others. This compilation of these 100+ tips will better help you to achieve this goal for your next dates. An approach of "common sense" is therefore used.

These 100+ tips are applicable for both online and offline parts of your dates. If you are searching for some time or are new to the singles scene, there are probably a few tips that will help you or be used as a reminder.

Unfortunately, there are people on these sites that only want your money. They will try to steal your money in a sneaky way. So you will find tips to help you detect them. The goal is not to scare you but to make you realize that there's negative in the virtual as in real life. Fortunately, the vast majority are honest people just like you.

Even if 1coupleavie.com is a social network for someone searching for a serious relationship only or to solidify a couple, some of these tips are specifically for other types of dating sites.

About 1coupleavie.com

1 Couple à Vie, translated from French to English, mean 1 Couple For Life! This is a community of serious singles from U.S.A, Canada, U.K, France, .... who want to find only a serious relationship on the long term AND also solidify the couple by helping each other. It is your community 2 for 1 to help you make 1!

You will find seriousness, humor, respect, honesty, friendship, balance, but certainly not any wasted time from the members in this community. This is a one more tools to find your soulmate and have beautiful dates in the REAL. Yes, this is THE real life date that will be the real test to see if it click ... or not with the other person!

Why did I start 1 Couple à Vie?

1. I was tired of being contacted by women that were not serious.
2. I was tired of paying $20-30 per month to get basic features like contacting women or participate on the forum. To pay in the $10/month range, I had to buy 6 months in advance.
3. And using free sites well ... it was even worst for me since I was contacted by more women claiming to be from my city/province of Québec but was from another country.
4. The situation was even worst for my women friends.

By starting my serious only site, I can make it a community that we can be proud of (read the Respect clause). Plus, I can offer from Free to very reasonable pricing ($13.80/year or less) for those that want features like a video profile, no ads, who visited their profile ... and for me to found or find by my soul mate too!

Here are some valuable tips:

- See if your subscription will be automatically renewed at the end of the term. This is often the case, and often without notice. Check if this is clearly stated on the home page, when you subscribe. Check if this is a recurring payment or if it is to renew manually. Take note if the subscription is recurring and the duration of the subscription (6-12 months).

- Visit your sites on a regular basis, once every 2-3 days for the most important sites and 1-2 times per month for secondary sites. This will demonstrate that you are actively searching.

- Create a user name that matches your personality and is related to the type of site you use.

Example: Having "SexMachine69" on a site for serious relationship is not appropriate, but okay on a site suitable for adults.

- Join a dating site that matches what you are really searching for. Some sites are better suited than others.

Example: 1coupleavie.com is for singles searching for a serious relationship only and for couples who want to solidify their relation.

Example: There are also specialized dating sites for religion, ethnicity, hobbies...

- Use all the features of the site so that your profile is featured as "Hot List/The Serious", Audio or Video profile, forum...

- Do not meet the "professionals of dating sites". They date several people, BUT often without actually wanting to have a real relationship. Their sites status remains active and continue to communicate with other members, even after you think are exclusive.

- Avoid the "players". As the "professionals of dating sites", you will notice their profile not only on your site but also at multiple sites with different information for dating the specific types of singles that are those sites.
- Add value to your profile if your site allows it. Get involved in forums, blogs and chats rooms. The more you contribute by being active on the site, the more likely you will be noticed and thus find someone compatible with you.
- Avoid the hype. This is not because a site is popular that it will give good results. Sometimes, you may be better served with a specialized site with fewer members than a popular site.
- In case of doubt about a site, use the free trial period or at a discounted price before you join as a paying member. Many sites offer free trials or offer access to some features for free.
- Read about the experiences of other members who have been using online dating. Listen to the stories of friends and acquaintances. Weigh the pros and cons to see if online dating is something that can work for you.
- When paying on a site, do not double-click the button to subscribe. On some dating sites, you pay twice if you do this.
- Online dating is not just a game of chance. If you contact the type of people that meet your criteria, you're more likely to get answers from people that you are searching for and thus find your soul mate.
- Leave the site using the "logout" from profile and not just by closing your web browser. Some sites will disconnect you after a while, but others keep the connection open all day or more. This can be interpreted as:
  - * The other member may think you are "24h" online talking with other members.
  - * If this is an oversight and that the other member does not want to believe you, so this member is not a person for you.

- When to delete your profile?

Some people delete their profile when they had a meeting while others leave open for several years. But erasing depends on the type of site and the type of meeting you are searching for.

Example: On 1coupleavie.com, the member may switch from "Single" to "Start of a relationship" and finally to "In a relationship". As 1coupleavie.com is a community for people searching for a long term relationship, the two members should stay and help or get help from other couples to solidify this new couple. Also, the couple can meet other couples for activities in order to break the "routine".

-In your profile, include positive and unique details about you. This will set you apart from the rest of the other members.

- Write short paragraphs (3-4 lines max) in your profile description.

- Avoid writing a list of 100 criteria of the type of person you are searching for in your profile. That person does not exist!

- Leave a little mystery. If you mention too much information on your profile, it will not encourage people to send you a message. Leave them wanting more, giving them just enough. The opposite is true; too little information can mean that you really do not want a meeting.

Example: "I know what I want and what I do not." Sorry! But others cannot read your mind.

- Create the best profile possible. Ask your family or friends tell you what they think of your profile. Do not be afraid to change it after a few weeks.

- Always check for errors of grammar or spelling, especially in your profile and in the first message you send. Ask someone you trust to help you.

Example: Make at least an attempt to correct inadvertent errors by reading it a second time. But do not forget that the content is more important than the medium.

- Beware of those who really make too many grammatical or spelling errors, either in their profile or messages.

If they don't seem to have a basic understanding of your native language, they are possibly low-level crooks. Unfortunately, the opposite is also true. The best crooks are professionals.

However, a person may not have much education or be newly arrived in the country without being a bad person. His/her explanations and your judgment will help you in your decision.

- Always enter your preferences on what you are searching for in its entirety so not to be contacted by members who do not match your criteria. Unfortunately, there are those who will bypass your criteria by contacting you anyway.

- Try not to be too serious in your profile. Let yourself go. Online dating is supposed to be fun and exciting, not a chore.

- Be positive in your profile. If you write a laundry list of everything you do not want in a potential person, you will be perceived as both unattainable and undesirable.

- If you have not received a message for an extended period of time on a site, you should rewrite the description of your profile or highlight yourself. Some sites have a ranking system.

- Update regularly your information on your profile. Life happens and sometimes our views change on certain issues. Maybe you are moved to another location, your income is different than when you joined the site, lost weight or you have changed your religion. Whatever the case, your profile must be updated regularly.

- The idea of a profile is to highlight yourself to other members thus doing marketing. The style to do it may change but the basic remains the same. It's marketing, so if the message does not come thru, it must be changed.

- Add recent photos (not more than one year) of yourself that show you like you are today.

- Add additional photos that show you in the process of carrying out the activities that you enjoy.

- Do not be afraid to ask for more photos from a particular member if the photos she/he has on her/his profile seem a little too ambiguous, too professional or taken from too far.

Example: A man or a woman who claims he or she is slim or average but has only photos of the face in the profile. If physical appearance is important to you, it will save you time.

Example: A fraudster will have 1 or 2 photos downloaded from the internet or another site. The picture will be a woman but it's a man who controls the fake profile. On some sites, like 1coupleavie.com, members can validate their photos. So, if you think this is a scam, the fake member cannot validate the photo and the site will delete the profile.

- Be aware that there are suspicious profiles that tend to have beautiful photos of people taken in a perfect style for a fashion magazine. These photos are often fake and just too good to be true.

- Put several photos on your profile. More you have photos, more you will receive messages.

- Use your face as the primary photo of your profile.

- Avoid a photo where you are wearing sunglasses.

- Avoid group photos or photos with a distracting background for your main profile photo.

- Avoid showing too much skin on your profile photos, unless you use a site for adults. Men, keep your shirts, pants.

- Try adding photos of yourself in natural environments.

- Often add fresh photos to your profile.

- Watch the scenery in the background of the photo. Is this in your area, taking on holiday...

Example: Someone tells you that he/she is currently in the city and sends you a photo taken outside ... a few hours ago. But, the plates of the cars are not from your area.

- Read each profile carefully before contacting a member. This prevents you from wasting your time. If there are not enough points in common between you, it is a sign of disrespect to the other member. Unfortunately, it is a problem of many who do not read the profiles and more so on general sites:

Example: Woman looking for a serious relationship contacted by a man who seeks intimate relationships.

Example: Man seeking a local relation contacted by a woman in another city or another country.

- For best results, send only original messages to potential members. Do not copy and paste your messages. On some sites, you must be a paying member to send this type of personalized messages.

- Instead of writing a message that you are "funny" or enjoy the "adventure", tell a funny story or write about an adventure you had.

- Create a catchy title for your message. Avoid using sentences beginning with "searching for" or "Hi".

Example: A beautiful woman for the majority of men can get 100-200 messages per day. She cannot really afford to take hours to read them all. So the title should be catchy so that she opens your message.

- Do not contact more than 3-4 members for better management of appointments.

- Always ask open questions in your messages so not to have simple answers like "yes" or "no".

- Avoid sending messages only to the most attractive members on the sites. They tend to receive more messages. Therefore, they tend to be much more selective in their responses due to lack of time.
- If you have not heard from a member after the first message, do not send him/her another. The member may simply not be interested and receiving more messages from you will only provoke him/her, thus either blocking you or complaining to the site manager.
- Do not overuse options "wink", "flirt" or "virtual gift" by sending them to too many members. Send them to members that really interest you.
- When you send a message to another member, avoid generic messages such as "Hi" or "Beautiful profile" Instead, make a reference to something real, especially that is in the profile of the member.
- Before sending a message to anyone, make sure it is an active member and has visited the site at least once in the last month. Otherwise, do not expect a reply. Sometimes people forget they have a profile on the site.
- Women tend to receive hundreds of messages per day. If you are a man trying to attract the attention of one particular woman, write a title, a message that will attract her attention. No bland messages.
- Learn how to flirt online.
- Be prepared for steep end in conversations that seemed to be going well and then suddenly, one member cease all communication with you. Be ready for it. This will happen. Do not over analyze. It is a waste of energy. Go to the next person.
- Be respectful in all messages you send to other members.
- Always save the profiles of members who have caught your interest. Build this list by sending a message to each member unique and individualized. This is better than just sending a generic message to members randomly.

- By listening to the voice of another person, it can give you clues about the type of person she/he is and if it seems compatible with you.

Example: Does his way of speaking please you?

However, you should consider a few things: timid person, knowledge of the language ...

- Fraud in the form of a big bill: A man is contacted by a woman for a dinner date. SHE invited him to a restaurant she knows very well. After dessert and a few glasses of wine, the man wants to pay the entire bill. But when receiving the bill, the man finds himself with a 2x-6x inflated bill of the actual amount. She is in collusion with one or more people in the restaurant.

- To increase the number of members, some sites buy profiles from resellers of singles profiles. These profiles can be true or false depending on the quality of the reseller. In the case of a true profile, the member may not know that he is now on a new dating site. It is often written in terms of use to help "promote" even more a member. However, the member's information may not be current.

- Several sites auto-approve, without verification, new members and their photos. The advantage for you is to have instant access. But the disadvantage is that you will have members sending you messages to sell products and services of all kinds. Is there going to be a minimum of moderation on the part of the site in this case?

On 1coupleavie.com, we perform a basic validation (current country and email) to protect as much as possible other members. There is also a way for members to report "fake" members. Until this manual validation is not done, the new member cannot do anything other than to fill the profile.

- Do not give out personal information too quickly such as: your home address, email address or any other personal financial information in your profile or by email.

- Have the first meeting in a public place (coffee shop, restaurant, park ...)

- Do not respond to messages that first direct you to another site or want to communicate with you by email when the external communication options are available for free on the site. What is the real purpose of the person in this case?
- Avoid contacts with members who live too far from you, unless you are ready to move at any time. Also, when it is on another continent, it may be a tactic for scammers to create an emotional connection before asking for money.
- At any time, if the person starts to ask for money immediately cease all communication with that member. The pro scammers will wait sometimes months with the intention of obtaining a bigger amount.
- Never transfer money to someone who asks you on whatever sites.
- To feel safer, do a background check of the person you want to meet. Most sites do not do these checks on their members. But, this information is not always easy to find for most people. Do a quick search with the name of the person with the search engines. Photos or other social networks and information can give an angle to a person that is negative or positive.
- Avoid any communication outside the sites. If there is less control, it means a greater probability to chat with a person of bad taste that will be able to re-contact you. Also, the site will not be able to penalize in the case of non-respect of the member.
- When you give your credit card information on a site to make your payment, make sure that the page is secure. Look for a "https://" at the beginning of the URL of the site on the payment page. However, the use of PayPal (It's free) or equivalent is safer to make your payment because you do not have to give your credit card number to the site directly.
- Meet the people with whom you communicate only when you feel comfortable with that person, not because that person is putting pressure on you.

Example: A manipulator might tell you that you do not trust him (indirect) or he will stop talking to you(direct) if you do not meet in real and under his terms.

- When you use general sites with intimate encounters or "adult", be aware that there are profiles that belong to escorts. They are usually quick to give you their contact information for the initial contact.

This is also true for telephone dating services. Solicitation, but not prostitution, being banned in Canada, the escort will often say in her message that she seeks a "generous" man. And no, she does not say a "generous of heart" in her sentence.

- Tip for telephone date services: To avoid losing your minutes unnecessarily and if you are classified as serious relationship/casual say it clearly in the first few seconds of your message. If you do not want to be contacted by escorts say it in your permanent profile. Escorts will respect that most of the time.

- When using a webcam service on an "adult" site, discussed only with members from the site. If a woman or a man tries to take you to another site, avoid them.

- Read the messages you receive on adult sites carefully. If you talk about a sexual encounter at a specific location in the original message, take your precautions. Communicate first with the member before the meeting.

- Always tell someone close where you will meet the person or leave a note on the counter or table.

- On a date, do not leave your belongings unattended like your cell phone, your wallet, your purse, your car or house keys. Keep them with you at all times.

- Pay attention to the people you meet; some are already in a relationship with another person. Men and women, who frequently cancel appointments or are unable to consistently give you their availability, are often in this category.

- If you decide to join a site 100% free, be aware that these sites tend to have a lot more scammers than paying sites. The reason is simple: scammers can open as many profiles as they want.

- When you sign up for a free subscription, you can begin to receive messages from alleged members. You must understand that these can be false messages to make you pay a subscription when private messaging is not free. The more the message is inviting and encouraging, the more it's likely to be false.

- Do not disclose where you live or work in a first date.

- For women, use *67 (to hide your phone number) when you first contact a man then thus ask for his phone number. When you are confident, give him your number.

Sometimes, some men are frustrated by a refusal on your part (if you do not give your phone) because they will not be able to contact you again. Also, if he refuses and depending on his attitude of this demand, you can evaluate what kind of man he is.

- For greater security, it happens that some women will give another name.

- Tactics of fraud:

* The person said to live in your area and be on a business trip outside the country for a 2-3 month contract. This person is often in Africa. The person probably did a search of your area to be more credible in your eyes.

* The person has a good salary, a good job, has a business

* 1-2 are photos of her/him on the profile. These photos often come from another site/blog.

* This person communicates only by email, chats in text mode, because their web camera "does not work" or the internet connection is not fast enough, too often will cut when using the webcam (Africa!)

* The person asks for money saying she/he was robbed thus no credit cards, have an urgent need for medicine ... Thus, these scammers is testing the limits of their victim.

What you need to remember:

1. outside your area, but "temporarily"
2. No video via web
3. Difficulty to send an updated photo
4. Asks for money after a few weeks/months.

- Try new activities during the first meeting that the traditional café/restaurant.

Example: Take a walk in the historical heart of the city or on a popular hiking trail.

- Know when to ask for a date. Wait too long or too fast may be sending the wrong message to the other who may lose interest.

- Avoid excessive negativistic when you meet a person, especially in the first date.

- Be yourself at all times. Do not send the "ideal candidate" for yourself.

- At the beginning, have safe sex. According to statistics, one date in three on a first encounter finished with an intimate relation.

- Have a real conversation with the person when you meet her/him. Also, do not do an "interview" like it was for a job.

- Do not talk about your divorce or your past relationships, especially in a negative way, which failed unless these subjects come naturally during the conversation.

- Avoid the temptation to date too many people at the same time. You will not be able to give enough of your time and the person will feel it.

- Women with whom you communicate are still the same as those you encounter. They expect you to be a gentleman. Opening a door is so simple!

- If you date several people at the same time, be sure to change places during your dates. Re-seeing a person you dated last week at the same place can cause some discomfort.

- For more safety during a first appointment, ask a friend if she/he can call you 30-60 minutes later. Choose a phrase to indicate that the date is going well or not. Or, apologize and go to the bathroom to give a signal to your friend to contact you. The 2nd is more correct.

- Have a positive attitude while having a realistic expectation of dating sites.

- Be self-deprecating to show that you are able to laugh at yourself while finding a positive angle.

- Be honest about yourself. Do not lie about your age, height, build, children, financial state...

Why lie? The person will know/see you anyway and starting on a lie is not the best way to start a new relationship.

- Keep your expectations realistic. Avoid creating a fantasy or ideal partner in your mind. So have 3-4 criteria that are NOT negotiable. Consider other criteria as a bonus.

- Open your mind to date people who do not fit the type of person you are accustomed to meet, but keep in mind your 3-4 criteria that are non-negotiable.

- Be prepared to give the process of dating at least 6 months to give you the best chance of finding a soul mate. For the vast majority of sites, registration is free thus the person you are searching for could register after you.

- Maintain an active lifestyle into your daily life. Avoid dating sites fatigue that tends to happen when you are on the sites for long periods. Consider sites like additional tools.

- Do not become frustrated of not finding "the" person faster than you would have thought. Online dating can take a long time to lead to success. You just need to continue.

- If you had a bad experience at dating and try to date again, say to yourself that the past is no guarantee of the future. Start over with an open mind.

- Do not compromise your principles, your values.
- Do not seem desperate in your messages or in your profile.
- Know exactly what kind of relationship you are searching for when you join a site.

Do not set a time to find love.

- If you feel you want to become exclusive with someone you met on a dating site, do not be afraid to tell them. The sooner you do, the better.
- Do not lead on another member because you expect something better to come along.
- Do not compare people to each other. Judge people based on their own merits and not how they compare with others.
- Never lose your sense of humor with all of it.
- Watch your wallet on dates. Do not try to impress the person by going to more expensive restaurants or events. You may find yourself unable to pay for future dates, or be the gravy train to someone, in the name of love.
- Give peoples the benefit of the doubt when you date them. Do not be too quick to judge.
- The words are easy to say but it is actions that speak more. So in the early days, you must watch if the two coincide from the other member.

Example: The person says she/he will do something to help you out that should be easy for her/him. But after three weeks with her/him and everything is going great, nothing was done. There is no reason as being sick, a business trip ... to prevent it to be done.

- Not wanting to make a tip of morality, do not use the sites if you're still in a relationship.

In recent years, there are now specialized sites for extramarital encounters where virtual discretion is the priority. But, what if a friend of the other see you two together in the real world? Click! A photo taken on a cell phone. The world is so small now that all will be discovered with time!

By the way, on a site like 1coupleavie.com, it would not be respectful of our members who want a long term relationship.

If your relationship is broken to the point that you are thinking to go elsewhere:

- * Try to strengthen your relationship by communicating more. This is the 2nd goal of 1coupleavie.com.
- * If it is really impossible after genuine efforts of both, then it will be the end of your relationship. But, you both have the right to be happy all on your own. Learn about your relationship so to not make the same mistakes in the future.

- Already in relationship? Yes, sometimes some members are already in a relationship ... without telling the other person letting her/him thinking that she/he is single. Here are 4 tips that can help you:

- * The date is always at the same time, same day of the week. Does the other person in the couple have a scheduled activity like a painting course, a hockey game?
- * After a while, the person has not yet presented you to her/his family, her/his friends. Is her/his intention really serious?
- * The person does not give you her/his home phone number but only her/his cell. Is it because the person does not want the other to pick up in her/his place? To be fair that in this last point, many people only use a cellphone now. But this tip is good as long as you know that the other person has mentioned he/she has a home phone line.
- * The person never invited you to her/his home.

Earn Money by Inviting Friends/Family

Once you join (free or paid), you can earn money by inviting friends/family to be part of our community.

In both cases, we pay you only when members pay us by becoming paying members (Base or Privilege). You get a 50% commission.

Example:

Let's say that you invite 20-30 friends/family per month that you know who are actively looking for a serious relationship.

7 members join on your recommendation and also use the 10% coupon when paying for the 1 year Privilege.

That's  $$13.80 - 10\% = $12.42$

You earn a 50% commission for each member on the $12.42 thus $6,21 per member.

7 members x $6,21 commission x 12 months = $521,64

What would you do with an extra $521,64? Buy a new computer, pay some debt or add it to your vacation budget.

(Of course your results will vary. I make no claim that you'll make this kind of money. This is NOT an income claim!) That all depends on your skills and effort.

Affiliate Program

But if you don't want to be a member, you can be an affiliate of 1coupleavie.com.

We pay you only when members pay us by becoming paying members (Base or Privilege). You get a 50% commission.

For example: Since a 1 year Privilege membership is only $13.80CAD/year (including taxes), YES per year, you can see that singles will be more tempted to become paying members. You would thus earn a $6.90CAD commission. The use of a coupon could lower the commission but increase the number of new paying members.

But, members that are there for the long term(3 or 5 years), can buy multiple years upfront for even less for them thus a bigger commission for you!

The advantage of being an affiliate is that you will have a special URL and banners to send people to 1coupleavie.com.

http://1coupleavie.com/?aff\_id=XXXXXX

For people with a lot of followers who are active in social networks or forums, your affiliate URL can be easily shared.

For webmasters, this will allow them to add banners very easy on their sites.

For Internet marketers or bloggers, this report can be given away to build a list of subscribers in the dating related niche. Just use the rebranded report of this free report.

Make sure that you target the right kind of potential demographic. For example, a website about toys targeted directly at children is not a good match.

Blogger example:

Let's say that you get 200-300 visitors per month who clicked on your affiliate link from your honest review about 1coupleavie.com or on banners on your blog. They are looking for a serious only dating site and your post mentioned the philosophy.

25 members join and also use the 10% coupon when paying for the 1 year Privilege.

That's $13.80 - 10% = $12,42

You earn a 50% commission for each member on the $12.42 thus $6,21 per member.

25 members x $6,21 commission x 12 months = $1863

You don't have a personal domain name? The same could be done on free web 2.0 sites.

You don't like to write content? Have the content written for you by having 100% original dating articles written by a writer.

Tip: I recommend paying extra for Premium or Elite for a better quality article. Then you can add or modify it to your taste. A 300 words Premium cost $4USD.

(Of course your results will vary. I make no claim that you'll make this kind of money. This is NOT an income claim!) That all depends on your skills and effort.

School/Non-profit Fundraising

Companies support schools and non-profit organizations every day. Let's be completely honest here, companies have goals for doing that: Branding, remaking their image ... and of course, helping out.

The philosophies of both parties just need to match for the fundraising to be a success. So, a company will not accept any proposal. For example, a company that sell children toys will prefer to be connected with a children hospital or an orphanage.

In the case of 1coupleavie.com, the basic goal is about serious relationship for the long term thus it would share values of most schools and non-profit organizations. Plus, that's thinking outside of the box since most do not think of doing that!

By contacting us, a school or a non-profit organization could raise money all year or in a short period.

This would give another option to potential givers to support the local school or organization by getting a service in return that they do need and will use.

This does not mean it should be the only way to raise money. Selling cookies, magazines subscriptions, calendars, candies or have an auction ... should still be options available thus part of the overall fundraising effort.

It's important that givers want to be part of our community since 1coupleavie.com is more than a conventional dating site. We do accept couples that want to stay in a relationship for life thus it's not for singles only. That's the secondary goal of 1coupleavie.com: helping each other to be 1 Couple for Life.

Plus, if the new members (givers) are local singles, it could be a way for them to meet other local singles looking for a serious relation that otherwise may not had find each other in other situations.

Once accepted, you can put one of our banners on your school or non-profit organization site with your fundraising link.

Example:

Let's say that your school has 1000 parents (couples and singles).

175 parents use a 10% coupon by being 1 year Privilege members.

That's $13.80 - 10% = $12,42

You earn a 50% commission for each parent on the $12,42 thus $6,21 per parent.

175 parents x $6,21 commission = $1086,75

That's the first year. (This is NOT an income claim!)

After 2-3 years, your statistic show that you get 150-200 new parents. That's not counting other adults in the area that will join too.

Personal Note: I may have a small site compare to bigger sites but that did not stopped me from offering a fundraising page for charities (support 5) early on my site to help in my own way. I don't have to make thousands or millions to start helping others!
